Whittakes is twenty-one years old, has a very light-brown face and short, curly hair. He told his story volubly, and seemed to be particularly auxious that the country should know all about his record before he came to West Point. In denying the truth of the theory that he did the deed himself, he spoke with his usual deliberation, as though he had weighed his sentences beforehand.

He added some details to the story of the eventful night. One of his assailants suggested that they shave his head, and a few locks of his hair were cut off. The short man, who seems to have been the tender-hearted one of the three, held aloof, he says, from the struggle, but at the close offered to put his bandkerchief under his car so as to stop the bleeding. "Then," continued WHITTAKER, "one of the men said, 'Get a glass, and let him "one of the men said, 'Get a glass, and let him see himself.' They brought a glass, and, after pressing it against my nose, broke it over my head. When they were about to go away I asked them to put a pillow under my head, and they did so."

We shall await the action of the investigation, thinking that General SCHOFIELD sounded its key-note when he found a motive for WRITTAKER having mutilated himself. If such an outrage could possibly be committed by anyone from the outside it would show a lax state of discipline at West Point, and such as is not usual in the army or even at the schools where soldiers are manufactured, and where sentinels are posted to protect life and property from depredation. One of two or three things is certain-this outrage should be either fastened by positive and irrefragable proof upon WHITTAKER himself, or the guilty parties should be detected and punished, or the school should be abolished as incapable The Chicago Inter-Ocean recently alluded of protecting its own students from noeto the rumors that have been flying around turnal violence. A Southern View. The New Orleans Ledger (Rep.) says: "Many persons express surprise that Mr. Henry Vigil and Mr. Houston Gully, both high-toned Democratic gontlemen whose names have been unfortunately connected with the assasination of Hon. John P. Gilmer, a Republican of Kemper county, Miss, should submit to the tomfoolery of a trial. They don't seem to understand that it is a mere form, required by law, and, while it may result in a little inconvenience to Messrs. Vigil and Gully, no apprehension need be entertained as to the verdet. They will be acquitted."

dict. They will be acquitted."

We beg to inform the Leager that no jury anywhere, South or North, of any color, would convict anybody for killing Gilmer if the jury had the faintest idea of Gilmer. Every man, white and colored, in this country who knew Gilmer will bear testimony at any ime that he possessed more capacity as a cool black-hearted murderer than any of the vulture carpet-baggers who fed upon the vitals of the South during the dark days of reconstruc-tion. field Republican !-- Inter-Ocea As General Grant was riding through the streets of Houston, Tex., a heroic young man drow near unto bis carriage and shouted, "Hurrah for Jeff Davis!" Colonel Tracy, who sat beside the great man, remarked that in a city of 25,000 inhabitants there was likely to hear the street of the control of the contro one d--d fool. The General coincided, and added: "There are fools all the world over." We are glad that Grant took it so coolly who marched into the jaws of battle and death as if to a dress parade, and heroically gave their lives to a now beaten, discarded and repudiated cause. Should Grant be nominated, there are thousands of ex-Confederates who will vote for him, and it is quite likely that Grant, in return, will remember his Souther friends. It strikes us that we are on the ev of strange happenings in the political world.-Editorial in Southern Intelligencer.
